Resolutions.
We hold it to be absolutely essential to the preservation of the liberties of the citizen, that the several States shall be maintained in all their rights, dignity and equality, as the most complete and reliable administration of their own domestic concerns, and the surest bulwark against anti-republican tendencies. Every attempt on the part of the Federal Government to exercise a power not delegated to it in the Constitution, or to exercise a delegated power in any manner not therein prescribed, is an act of usurpation, demanding the instant and unqualified condemnation of a people jealous of their liberties. And we hold that any unconstitutional interference by the General Government with the local affairs of any State to any extent or under any pretense whatever should be at once and completely repudiated, and the destruction of our Federal system and the consolidation of all power in a centralized despotism.

"Onions are recommended as an antidote for sleeplessness." Of course.—How can a fellow snore loudly unless he has a strong breath?

COL. PHIL LEE, the brilliant lawyer and fearless prosecutor of the Louisville judicial circuit, died at his residence in Louisville day before yesterday.

Now save your bed bugs. It has been discovered that, soaked in a solution of nitrate of potash, they produce a delicate, delicious, and penetrating perfume for the handkerchief and toilet.

A LEITCHFIELD girl just one month married, upon meeting an old schoolmate, put on a very wise look and remarked: "You cannot imagine the labor and anxiety incident to the care of a family."

A FRIEND of ours, the other day, put a bottle of whisky in a rear pocket and sat down upon it, and in a few moments demonstrated the fact that whisky will have the same effect upon a man's brain whether it is soaked into him or swallowed.

Let those Democrats who belong to the Grangers decline to take any stock in the proposition, "If you'll vote for HARLAN I'll vote for HOCKER." Let Radicals vote for whom they please, the unscrutable ticket for every Democrat is, McCREARY and HOCKER. In Hoc(ter) signo vinces.

A CALIFORNIA man saw his neighbor, the other night, crawling slowly homeward on his hands and knees, and accosted him with, "Why don't you get up and walk, Mr. GONZALEZ? Why don't you get up and walk?" "I w-would," was the reply, "b-but the ice's so al-m-m-igh-ty thin (hic) 'ere that I'm a-a-fraid I sh'll brea(hic) through!"

THERE is nothing like having a tasteful and appreciative sweetheart. We possess such a treasure in Miss MAGGIE KING, who has gladdened our heart and brightened our sanctum with a dish of rare and beautiful flowers. Ah! Miss MAGGIE, when kisses, like dew-drops, hang on thy lip and loveliness, like humming-birds, come there to sip, listen for the flutter of our wings.

A NEW Grange in Grayson county was christened Pocahontas. A member who some years ago was a Leitchfield merchant was called upon for some dedicatory remarks. Said he: "Pocahontas was a great man; he was a kind-hearted and true man." "Hold on," cried the Master, "Pocahontas was a woman." "Was she?" said the orator; "Well, that's just my luck. How am I expected to know? I never read the Bible."

CAPT. SAM HILL, by withdrawing from the Legislative canvass, displays a splendid patriotism that will not be forgotten by the Democracy, renders the election of a Radical representative an impossible thing, and blocks the nicest little game imaginable concocted by the opposition leaders.

EDITOR HERALD:—For reasons satisfactory to myself, and many of my friends, I hereby decline to make the race for representative in the Legislature. To those who so generously proffered me their support, I return my thanks. With those who preferred another for their representative, I have no quarrel to urge. Respectfully, SAM E. HILL. Hartford, Ky., July 13th, 1875.

We had no idea, until within the last few days, that our Radical friends were so solicitous for the welfare of the Democracy of Ohio county. Why, to hear them talk, one would suppose that all their hope for happiness hung upon a war "for principle" between the Democrats and Grangers of the county, and in which conflict they propose to be our right trusty friends and loyal allies.—But with all their soft-solder and blarney they failed to "catch a weasel asleep."

There is not—there cannot be—strife betwixt the Democrats and the Grangers. They both labor to the same end. The Grangers, in putting forward a farmer's candidate for the Legislature, were wise enough to select a gentleman of irreproachable character, one whose record as a voter has been unswerving Democratic, and who is known throughout the length and breadth of the county as an honorable, high-toned gentleman; an industrious and intelligent farmer, and a man whose probity is above all question. He is a candidate whom no Democrat can be ashamed of supporting. He still claims to be a Democrat, and the resolutions adopted by the Grangers at the time of his nomination, are fruitful of excellent Democratic doctrine.

AN ORIGINAL NOVELLETTE.

"A Heroine of To-Day."

WRITTEN FOR THE HARTFORD HERALD, BY VIOLA.

CHAPTER V.

Ten years, with its joys and sorrows, its happinesses and miseries, its fondly cherished recollections and brightest hopes, have passed away and are now numbered with the countless ages that have ceaselessly rolled on until engulfed in the dark and gloomy abyss of the mighty Past. We will now resume the severed thread of our story.

Mary was married several years ago. She and her liege lord sailed for Europe soon after her marriage to spend a few years in travel. Latta obtained a situation in college soon after her father's death, and lived in almost entire seclusion. But her name had been indelibly graven on an enduring tablet in the temple of fame, and she was everywhere received with honor. By her own exertion, and through the exercise of her talents, she had become possessed of a handsome fortune.—It had been a long time since she had heard from Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, when, one evening, she sat sadly dreaming of other days, the mail boy handed her a letter.—She recognized the superscription as that of her kind benefactors, and hastily broke the seal. It ran thus:

"DEAR LATTI:—Do come and comfort us in our despair. The tide of fortune has indeed changed. Mr. Ellis, involving his estate in a large speculation, lost all. We will soon be without shelter, to even shield us from the storm. Mary embarked for Europe after her marriage, and we have heard nothing from her for months; and often, in moments of low-spiritedness, I imagine she is dead. Oh! why did not God send us this great trial when our hearts were stout, and able to bear it?—Yet I will try to think, 'Tis for the best.' Do come to us. Yours in trouble, 'MARTHA ELLIS.'"

This was quite a surprise to Latta. She started as soon as possible, bidding the dull routine of school life farewell. Arrived at the village of her former residence, she first sought the holder of the mortgage on Mr. Ellis' estate, which she purchased, and then went to them—not to receive thanks due her, for she said she was only returning past favors.

They received her with outspread arms. It seemed like an angel's visit, bringing alleviation of their troubles, and stirring their rugged pathway with flowers.

Five years sped swiftly by since Latta had come to live with Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, and fill their absent daughter's place.

One pleasant autumnal afternoon, the trio sat in the veranda, conversing of the past and their loved ones. A carriage drove up to their gate, and a lady and gentleman alighted, and to the astonishment and joy of all, Mary and her husband walked up the pavement.

My pen is inadequate to describe their happiness. All were too full for utterance. Mary at last broke the silence with the story of her long absence.

After she and her husband had spent three years in traveling from one country to another, visiting every spot of any note in history or story, they embarked for America. The vessel in which they sailed was wrecked, and she and her husband were separated. For years neither knew whether the other lived. Mary was cast upon an almost barren coast, inhabited by poor and illiterate fishermen, who were as a people almost entirely cut off from communication with the outer world. She had lost everything in the wreck, and was unable to make her situation known to those who would have flown to her relief. Mr. Hubert, her husband, had searched the world over for her. He dared not return to her parents with the story of her supposed death. But after awhile he summoned up courage to start to them. About this time fortune had unexpectedly favored Mary with kind friends, who provided her with funds to return home. For days she and Mr. Hubert traveled together in the same car, stopped at the same hotel, yet each failed to recognize the other. At length, just before reaching their place of destination, the discovery was made, and husband and wife were soon locked in each others arms. Now that Mary had come, and their household was complete, Latta spoke of returning to her school duties, but her kind benefactor would not consent. Thus they lived on. Latta had just finished a new novel, which she entitled "The Disappointment of Life," a tale culled from the darker pages of her own history. She had finished the last line on the eve of her thirty-fifth birthday, as the sun was going down in the far-off west. She laid her pen down with a weary sigh, and called Mrs. Ellis, who was in an adjoining room, to come to her, (for she had been confined to her room from a slight indisposition, as they all thought.) She said:

"Mrs. Ellis, soon after my mother's death, you said that I should not swerve from duty to myself or others: that God had given me a mission to perform. Have I done so? Have I done my duty?" "Yes, my darling; but why do you ask so strange a question?" "Because I wish to know," and an almost angelic smile wreathed her countenance, "for I am going to join the loved ones at Home. I have finished my last labor, and most solemnly do I dedicate it to my mother. I will not try to thank you, my almost second parent, for the loving kindness you have ever bestowed on me. My breath is growing short, but oh, I do not fear death. He is a welcome visitor. God has ever been my comforter. He will not forsake me now."

She then repeated the twenty-third psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd," and raised her beautiful eyes imploringly, and clasped her hands together in earnest prayer, then, gasping as if for breath, laid back on the couch upon which she was seated, and closed her eyes in sleep—never more to wake in this wicked world of ours, but in that brilliant home prepared for all God's servants.

The morning of her life had been overcast by clouds; but as the noon came on she triumphed over every obstacle, every cloud was dispersed, the sun grew brighter and brighter, until it shone forth in perfect light; and her death was as tranquil as the closing of a summer eve.

THE END.
For the Hartford Herald.
THE LESSON OF LIFE.

When everything is counted, it will be found that the sum total of our lives resolves itself into but two things, and these are anticipation and memory. The pleasures and miseries of the moment are ephemeral, and only to be taken note of—they leave their record in the past. In youth, life is richest in anticipation; but as years roll on, the mind acquires the habit of looking backward; and when old age has come, there is nothing left this side of the grave. Fortunate is that man who, in the midst of the cares and turmoils of a busy and often unsatisfactory life, has a happy childhood to look back upon—a picture gallery of loving faces that once formed a home circle; a record of sunny years which includes all of the kindnesses that loving parents could impart.

Whoever robs a child of these pleasures, takes more than he can ever return to him in any way. A close, hard, narrow life lived in childhood dwarfs his whole nature, and leaves for him no blessed store of memories to fall back upon when the present becomes unsatisfying. Therefore, provide for your children all the enjoyments you can. In doing this, you not only give them present pleasure—which is a great deal, as in youth impressions are stronger and more readily received, and the capacity for enjoyment consequently greater for him in memories which shall last him all his life.

Let the atmosphere which surrounds your children be so impregnated with kindness that they shall breathe it in, as we breathe the air. Let their lives be a whole nature, and leaves for him no blessed store of memories to fall back upon when the present becomes unsatisfying. Therefore, provide for your children all the enjoyments you can. In doing this, you not only give them present pleasure—which is a great deal, as in youth impressions are stronger and more readily received, and the capacity for enjoyment consequently greater for him in memories which shall last him all his life.

GEN. FRANK BLAIR.

His Sudden Death at St. Louis, Thursday Night.

St. Louis, July 9.—Gen. Frank P. Blair, jr., died at half past eleven o'clock last night. Although the General had been sick a long time without any hope of recovery, his death was sudden and at the time unexpected. It seems that the immediate cause of Gen. Blair's death last night was a fall he received while walking from one room to another in his house. He had been out for a drive in the afternoon. He returned about 5 o'clock, and seemed to have enjoyed it much, and received considerable benefit, but while walking in his room he was attacked with dizziness, and fell, striking his temple against a piece of furniture, which rendered him insensible. Medical aid was immediately summoned, and every effort made to restore him to consciousness, but without success. At half past 11 he quietly passed away, surrounded by all the members of his family. His parents have been telegraphed to, and will probably arrive here in time for the funeral Sunday. The family desire a quiet funeral, but the members of the old First Missouri regiment, of which Gen. Blair was the first colonel, have called a meeting for tomorrow, and will probably decide to accompany the remains of their old commander to his grave; and other organizations may determine to do likewise.

A BOLD MURDER.

An Engine and Express Car Captured by Brigands at Long Point, Ill.—Engineer Ames Shot Dead, and the Rest of the Train Detached and Abandoned.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 9.—Long Point a station on the Vandalia railroad, three miles west of Casey, Illinois, is a place where all trains on that road usually stop for water. It is a lonesome place, situated in the woods, with no one living within a mile and a half of it. It has long been considered by railroad men as a dangerous place. Several times lately the engineers have seen suspicious persons lurking about there at night and have run by without stopping for water.

ENGINEER AMES KILLED.
Last night at midnight, as train No. 5 east bound, conductor Fraley and engineer Milo Ames, came up to Long Point for water, two men boarded the locomotive, one from each side, and said to the engineer, "pull out."

The engineer was at first somewhat bewildered, when they said again "pull out," when he, seeming to comprehend the situation, said: "all right, I'll pull out."

The men then said, "we will run the thing ourselves," and at that both robbers fired. One of the shots killed the engineer instantly, and the other lodged in the cab.

MESSENGER BURKE ATTACKED.
The fireman, who was on the tank taking in water, immediately jumped and ran to the rear of the train to notify the train men, having heard the conversation and comprehending the situation. During these proceedings at the engine, a confederate had detached the Adams Express car, and they then, pulling the engine wide open, ran her about two miles east and stopped, blowing off brakes to deceive the express messenger. They then went to the door of the car and said, "Let me in, Jack." He replied to them, "You sons of bitches, I am ready for you. If you ever come in here you are dead men."

The robbers then commenced firing into the car. The messenger, Burke, said it seemed to him that there were a dozen of them, as the shots seemed to come from all directions.

PURSUED BY THE TRAIN MEN.
The conductor and train men, after the shots were fired, saw the situation of affairs, and at once set about to pursue them. They could only find one revolver on the train, but found two soldiers on the train who were armed with carbines. With these weapons the train men and the two soldiers started in pursuit of the engine and the robbers, but when they came up to the engine all was quiet, the robbers having fled. They found the engineer in the bottom of his cab, cold and stiff.

There chanced to be a freight engineer (Jack Vandergref) on the train, and he, with the fireman, immediately ran the engine back to the train and brought it in. ENTIRE FAILURE OF THE ROBBERIES.
The robbers failed to gain any entrance whatever into the express car, it being one of the close kind, having no windows and very strong in every way. Had they detached the Adams Express car also, which was immediately in the rear of the Adams, they would undoubtedly have accomplished their object, as it was an open car having windows, and the doors not being very strong. The train men found the hammer by which the coupling pin was knocked out, and which may hereafter serve as a clue to the discovery of the perpetrators of this outrage.

REWARD OFFERED FOR THE MURDERERS.
The train men speak in very flattering terms of the pluck and bravery displayed by the express messenger, Burke, under the trying circumstances in which he was placed. There is intense feeling among the railroad men over the tragical death of Engineer Ames, and should the perpetrators be caught it is very generally believed that it will not cost the State any money to prosecute them. Engineer Ames was one of the best engineers on the road. He was about thirty-five years old, and had been married but a short time. The robbers who boarded the locomotive wore long linen dusters. Conductor Fraley and all the train men in fact, did all they could under the circumstances. Several suspicious persons are already under arrest, and every effort will be made by the railroad company to bring the robbers to justice. They have, it is understood, already offered a reward of one thousand dollars. The particulars have been gathered from one of the train men who was a witness of the whole affair.

THREE MEN ARRESTED.
St. Louis, July 9.—A good deal of information was received here to-day regarding the murder of Engineer Ames and the attempted robbery of the Vandalia railroad train at Long Point last night, but the main facts of the affair are fully covered by the account from Terre Haute this morning. Major Simpson, general superintendent of the Vandalia road, received a dispatch stating that three men have been arrested, one of whom is known to have been engaged in the murder. The Vandalia Company offered a reward of $1,000 for each man connected with the affair. The City Council of Casey offered $150 reward, and this sum is expected to be largely increased by the county and State authorities.

THE MURDERED ENGINEER.
Engineer Ames was a native of Washington, Mass., where he has a brother. Another brother is a conductor on the Missouri Pacific road.

President Grant a Grandfather.
Long Branch, July 11.—Mrs. Algeron Sartoris, daughter of President Grant, gave birth this morning to a fine boy, weighing 10½ pounds.

CHAPTER 10.

AN ACT TO TAKE THE SENSE OF THE PEOPLE OF THIS STATE AS TO THE PROPERITY OF CALLING A CONVENTION TO REVISE THE CONSTITUTION.

WHEREAS, It is represented to the General Assembly that many of the good citizens of this Commonwealth do verily believe that experience has pointed out the necessity of calling a Convention with the view of amending the Constitution of this State; therefore,

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That it shall be the duty of the Sheriffs and other returning officers, at the next general elections to be held for Representatives after the passage of this act, to open a poll for and make a return to the Secretary of the State for the time being of the names of all citizens entitled to vote for Representatives who have voted for calling a Convention.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, That any Sheriff or other returning officer failing to perform the duty according to the provisions of the first section of this act, shall be subject to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, to be recovered by indictment by any court having jurisdiction thereof, and also be subject, upon conviction of such failure, to removal from office.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of State to have advertised this act in the columns of one weekly newspaper in every county of this State for two consecutive weeks immediately preceding the election hereinafter provided, and in one of the daily newspapers of the city of Louisville for thirty days immediately preceding the election. Provided, however, There is no weekly newspaper in any one or more counties of this Commonwealth in which said advertisement can be made, it is made his duty to have posted a printed copy of said bill, in handbill form, at the court-house door of such counties, for at least two consecutive weeks preceding said election.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, That the Public Printer shall, upon a separate leaf or sheet, print ten thousand copies of this act, and deliver them to the Secretary of State, who shall send seventy-five copies of the same to the clerk of the county court of each county in the State at the time of forwarding the acts of the General Assembly, and said clerks shall deliver the same to the sheriffs of their several counties.

Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the clerks or judges conducting the said general election to propound distinctly to each voter the following interrogatory: "Do you vote for calling a convention or not?" And if he answers in the affirmative, his name shall be recorded as having voted for calling a Convention.

Sec. 6. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Assessors of tax to open a column in their Assessors' books, and enroll therein the name of each citizen entitled to vote for Representative for the year 1875; and they shall be governed in all cases, in ascertaining who is entitled to vote by the laws then in force to prevent illegal voting; and this column, written in a fair and legible hand, shall be transmitted with the Assessors' books to the Auditor, who shall make out a copy thereof, and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State for the time being, who shall transmit the same to the next Legislature, as a list of those who are entitled to vote for Representatives, in order that the Legislature may have the means to ascertain whether a majority of the citizens of the State entitled to vote for Representatives have voted for a Convention.

Sec. 7. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of each Assessor of tax, who shall be in office in the year 1875, as soon as he shall be advised of the passage of this act, to go before a justice of the peace and take the following oath: I do solemnly swear I will, to the best of my skill and judgment, fairly ascertain the number of qualified voters in the district in which I was elected for the year 1875, and report the same, with my book made as Assessor of tax, before the first day of May, 1875.

Sec. 8. Be it further enacted, That the Assessors of tax may, and are hereby required to examine on oath any person in relation to his right to vote for Representatives, when he has doubts as to his right to vote; and any person who shall knowingly swear falsely before the assessor, and shall therefore be convicted, shall be subjected to all the pains and penalties of the crime of perjury.

Sec. 9. Be it further enacted, That the assessor shall write "sworn" opposite the name of each person who may be sworn by him.

Sec. 10. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Public Printer to print five hundred copies of the seventh, eighth and ninth sections of this act immediately after its passage, and deliver them to the Secretary of State for the time being, who shall transmit them forthwith to the county clerks, to be delivered by them as soon as possible to the assessors of tax for the year 1875.
